PFPers enjoy Neighborhood Potlucks and Dim Sum

On Saturday, February 25, four PFP families met in Philadelphia's Chinatown for Dim Sum at New Harmony Vegetarian Restaurant. The tofu was a big hit, as were the turnip cakes and sticky buns.

Look for more small group restaurant meetups in the future - and feel free to suggest your favorite place to Community Coordinator Stephanie Haynes.

This past weekend, PFP families gathered in member's homes around the region for our semi-annual Neighborhood Potlucks.

There was a big crowd at Tracy & Mia's in Queen Village, including a few families who were attending a PFP event for the first time.

Vicky's vegan banana waffles were a big hit in Queen Village on Saturday and at Sunday's West Philly potluck (pictured) at the home of Staci and Kristina.

PFPers from both sides of the Delaware gathered at the home of Bob and Bob in Bucks County.

In Mt. Airy, Yoel's homemade chocolate bark was a hit with kids and adults. The hosts' dog had fun following around the toddlers hoping for some scraps, while the prospective parents in attendance quizzed the parents.

2012's Camping with Pride has something for everyone!

This year, PFP's Camping with Pride trip will have something everyone - tent camping, cabins, B&Bs, and is close enough for a day trip, too!

We'll be at Mauch Chunk Lake Park near Jim Thorpe, PA the week of July 20-22. Tent camping is free for members or $25 for non-members. E-mail trip organizer Thom Radke to RSVP and hold your spot at camping@phillyfamilypride.org.

The park also has nice cottages near the group tent area if you'd rather not sleep on the ground. The cottages sleep up to six people and have electricity, but no running water. They are $68/night, and you must reserve for both Friday and Saturday nights. More info on the cottages and how to reserve yours.

The nearby town of Jim Thorpe has many Bed & Breakfast options for those who would rather stay in town. If you aren't staying at the park, it is $5/adult and $3/adult for children daily to enter the park for swimming, boating, hiking, fishing, etc..

We will also be organizing a few other side trips for the weekend, including a whitewater rafting trip. Stay tuned for more details.

Member Family Profile: Robyn Crawford and Lisa Hintelmann

PFP members Lisa and Robyn and their twins Gillian and Jeremy live in an old farmhouse in Stockton, New Jersey. Gillian and Jeremy will celebrate their third birthday March 31. They created their family through open adoption.

Lisa is a magazine entertainment editor. After a long career in music and sports, Robyn is enjoying being a stay at home mom - at least until the kids begin preschool.

Jeremy is the man of the house. He is a lover of books, sprinting, burritos, oranges and oversized pieces of machinery.

Gillian (aka "Miss G") is all up in everything. She enjoys painting, coloring, apples with almond butter, peppers, singing and dancing. The twins are also fond of baking, specializing in carrot muffins and banana bread.

Their family enjoys travel, cooking, hiking, exploratory road trips, t-ball and frisbee, and experiencing new things together.

When asked why they joined PFP, Lisa said, "because we wanted our kids to make friends with other kids whose families look like ours. And we hoped to make new friends ourselves - which happily, we already have done!"

"Our first PFP event, and our introduction to the organization, was marching in the New Hope Pride parade when Gillian and Jeremy were one. We thank Lauren Weil for inviting us!" added Robyn.

So far, the couple said their favorite event has been the Family Matters Conference, which was "enlightening, inspiring, and impressively organized." They also enjoyed the January trip to the Adventure Aquarium in Camden.

"We're looking forward to meeting other families, building a network and having new adventures together," they said.
